Search of His Clothes Brings to Light A Weird Assortment of Curious From Rags to Revolver.

This morning the police were summoned to Second West between Fourth and Fifth South street by citizens who complained that two men were begging on the streets. Detective Schulze and Officer "Bob" Golding went to the place in a buggy and placed under arrest Joe Ellis and G. J. Harmon. The patrol wagon was called and the two men were hauled to the station and charged with vagrancy.

"Uncle Billy" Hilton had the task of searching the men and while taking the personal effects from Ellis, Harmon, who is an old man, quietly slipped out of the front door and "beat it" up the street. He disappeared back of a blacksmith shop half a block east of the police station. He was soon missed and Hilton was in hot pursuit. The block was thoroughly searched but not the slightest trace of the man could be found. He did not run and how he disappeared so quickly is a mystery to the police.

FINALLY CAPTURED.

Within about three minutes after his "escape" however, he was seen by Detective Burt crossing State street. Harmon saw the officer and ran down Commercial street with Burt after him. The aged man was finally captured and returned to the station.

He said he ran away because he did not want to go to jail. "You charge me with vagrancy," said he, "but I ain't doin' no vagrancy."

UNIQUE COLLECTION.

Hilton began to search the old man but found that he had a task greater than he had bargained for. Harmon's pockets were stuffed with rags, strings, shoelaces, handkerchiefs, pieces of leather, decayed flowers, buttons, rubber washers, pieces of wood and almost everything imaginable. He had at least half a bushel of such stuff crammed into his pockets. In addition to this stuff he carried an old rusty revolver, loaded, a set of brass knuckles, a slung shot, two pairs of scissors and pocket knives. When asked why he was so heavily armed, he replied: "Oh, just for my own protection."

COUPLE OF PAINTERS.

Harmon is a painter by trade but is a collector of old rags, tins, pieces of leather, string and anything that to his mind is worth picking up.

Some time ago he was ejected from his home on Seventh South and Second East streets, and when he returned he threw his effects into the streets, they took a two days' job. The junk they took from the place would fill a box car. Harmon and his wife explained that they were going to do a job of painting and did not have the money to purchase the paint, so they went from house to house asking for assistance.

CLOSING OF CEMENT PLANT.

Believed Operations Will Be Concentrated at the Devil's Slide Works.

Manager Bailey of the Portland Cement works said today that nothing could be stated with any degree of definiteness as to the outcome of the present situation with the cement company until the meeting of the directors on July 2. Figuratively speaking, "everything is up in the air" until that time, and there are no indications pointing toward what may be expected, whether there is to be any change, or what that is liable to be in case there is any. All that Mr. Bailey could say was that the low prevailing price of cement made its manufacture unprofitable; consequently, as a matter of course, the works may shut down until different conditions.

Talks with contractors brings out an entirely different view of the situation. There is a general inclination to believe "something is up," that this shutdown is part of the workings of a combination likely to result in the permanent closing of the plant in the southwest part of the city, and the concentration of the company's energies at the new and fully up-to-date mill at the Devil's Slide in Weber canyon. This is regarded as the desire of the English stockholders, likely to be met at the July meeting of the directors. Cement is selling here at $2.05 per barrel of 350 pounds, net. Contractors claim it only costs 60 to 75 cents to manufacture here, so there is a large and healthy margin, whose existence can hardly be explained away by the closing down of the plant in Salt Lake. They call attention to the fact that Kansas cement, costing 40 cents to manufacture, can be Com'l Club Committee Favors Postponing Celebration.

The usual scenes of activity at the Commercial club lunch hour, were augmented today by the session of the real estate exchange which occupied the large private dining room, and a meeting of the committee on public entertainment, which held its session in a corner of the main hall. The latter met to consider the question of arranging a public celebration on July 4, when ground will be broken for the excavation for the Commercial club building. Those in attendance were W. J. Halloran, chairman of the committee, and the following members: J. P. Gardner, I. A. Clayton, H. M. Dinwoodie, C. J. Crabtree, Mr. Grosh, J. S. Critchlow and Secy. Fisher Harris.

After a full discussion it was unanimously decided that the committee should recommend to the board of governors that the public celebration be deferred until the laying of the corner stone, which is estimated will take place in September or October. The decision was arrived at, owing to the lack of time to arrange a suitable celebration on July 4, a week from next Saturday. Another reason was that many of the members of the club would be out of the city on the holiday. At the same time the committee will state to the board of governors that if it is their desire to proceed with the celebration the committee will take the matter in hand. President Halloran interviewed the Fort Douglas authorities in reference to having the troops and the band turn out, but was informed that it would be against the government regulations to do so except for purely patriotic celebrations.

WEATHER TALK.

A high barometer obtains over the greater part of the United States today, with promises of fair and warmer weather for this locality tomorrow. High barometric pressure covers most of the country between the Pacific coast and the Mississippi valley, causing fair weather over a large area and light frost in Wyoming. Over the south plateau and the upper lake region the barometric pressure is low. These conditions have caused showers or thunderstorms over portions of Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, North Dakota, Minnesota, Lake region and north Atlantic states, with excessive rainfall at Oklahoma, 2.82 inches.

CLEVELAND A GREAT MAN

SAY HIS LOCAL ADMIRERS

should get together in their efforts to advance it.

Grover Cleveland carried into private life the knowledge and experience he gained while in the White House, and his advice has been very helpful to the great institutions and interests of the country during the 17 years that have elapsed since his retirement from the presidency. I may add that Utah has a personal interest in Mr. Cleveland, who, while in office, he signed as president the enabling act under which Utah was admitted as a state.

Grover Cleveland's home life was admirable, and the devoted wife and children, while suffering a great loss in his death, have much to be thankful for in the career of the one they mourn.

Executive Joseph L. Rawlins—Mr. Cleveland's career has been prominent before the people of the country for many years. He was a man of impressive personality and was actuated by a high sense of duty. Not always gentle, acting perhaps not always expediently, he was nevertheless honest and conscientious. He was adversely criticised by contemporaries, but his high character and his motives will be better understood and he will be more highly considered and have just place among the great men of the nation.

Judge William H. Perkins—President Cleveland was a remarkable man. In a city and state noted for its great men he emerged from the mass and became a commanding figure, his fame spreading beyond the Empire state until he grew to be undisputed leader of his party. He was not so brilliant a man as Blaine, but his courage, industry and integrity, and his unswerving devotion to what he thought was right, brought him success that Blaine and more brilliant men have not achieved. Mr. Cleveland was greatly misunderstood by many. In spite, however, of a constant undecurrent of criticism and of being constantly misunderstood, he was a man of great courage and the course that he had marked out. In so doing he divided his party and doubtless contributed to his defeat. However, much he may have regretted the schism in his own party he thought that his course was one of patriotism and would make for the good of his country. He was a man who might be called a strong party man. While a Democrat and devoted to what he understood Democratic principles to be, he did not hesitate to oppose his party when its course contravened when he sincerely believed to be right. While he made himself opposition in the west because of his attitude on the silver question, he adopted and pursued became the policy of the Republican party and is now the accepted financial policy. As years go by American people are beginning to appreciate his intense love of the country and his patriotism. In every crisis he was a true American. He believed in the greatness of the republic, and as much as any man tried to carry out the principles of Washington and of Jefferson. Fixed, stable, firm in all things, he was altogether a great man.

B. H. Roberts—Grover Cleveland as president of the United States, during his second term of office was not popular in the west largely on account of his attitude in relation to the reorganization of silver, but Grover Cleveland, the man, down deep in the hearts of western people was respected all ways, because he possessed the qualities of a statesman, a patriot, a man of high character, and a man of high integrity. When the future historian shall make a list of the few really great men of the world, Grover Cleveland of the United States will be unable to leave the name of Cleveland from his roster of such presidents.

It is said by a gentleman of high historical ability that the men who are governed by their instincts, they follow where instinct leads. That the popular leader of the hour sees some present difficulty and is quick to grasp it, and that he deals with such question as it arises, leaving future consequences to those who are to come after him. Grover Cleveland was such a leader as this, and perhaps he may not be classed really as a "genius," but he was something more. He was possessed of statesman-like qualities of mind, which removed him from the class of the fickleless with that term, "genius." He was guided in his life, so far as I can make out, by a few simple principles, which he steadfastly adhered, and which course was the source alike of his power and his greatness.

The eulogy of Mark Antony, over the body of Brutus, has been pronounced at the bier of Grover Cleveland:

"His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him that nature might stand up and say to all the world, 'This is a man!'"

O. W. Powers—Grover Cleveland was a great man and a fearless man. Whatever he believed in, he stood for it, and with all the tenacity of a strong nature which marked him as one of the world's leaders. He was a thoroughgoing patriot, and he was not a hesitating when occasion demanded, to uphold the dignity of our country even though war might be the result as was evidenced by his attitude toward the Spanish war. He was a great man, and he was an honest, sincere man, which was the greatest of all. Public position never changed him. He never appreciated his greatness, which was strong evidence of his really great character. I had the honor of a warm personal friendship with Mr. Cleveland, and I formed for him high regard. I remember that at the time he was elected to the White House when he was notified of his nomination for president by the Democratic party, the ceremony was held in the East room, the members of the cabinet and their ladies were present. Mrs. Cleveland stood by her husband, and after the formal speeches were concluded, the committee was presented one by one. When I reached him he looked up in surprise and said "Hello, Powers, are you here?" How the folks getting on out in Utah. After we had all been presented a buffet lunch was served, and Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland moved about among the company in a charmingly informal manner and were ideal as host and hostess. Notwithstanding Mr. Cleveland vigorously enforced the Edmunds law, he was a true friend of Utah and of our people. I never asked was that we like the rest of the nation. He was never vindictive, and was always kind.

J. B. Letcher—Grover Cleveland will pass down in history as one of the greatest presidents this country ever had. He was a man of strong convictions, and he stood by them. I had the honor to be a delegate from Colorado to the convention that nominated him in 1884, and 11 years later, Dec. 16, 1895, I presented for his consideration the Constitution of the proposed state of Utah, a document that received his signature Jan. 4, 1896. On the occasion of the presentation, our party, consisting of Hoyt Sherman, Frank J. Cannon, John W. Burton and myself, were introduced by Gov. Caleb W. West.

Postmaster Arthur L. Thomas—I met Mr. Cleveland soon after he was inaugurated president, in company with other members of the Utah commission. He impressed me at the time as a great and strong man, and his subsequent career only increased this first impression. I regard him as one of the strong presidents of the country, patriotic and upright. He was great enough to rise superior to personal and political considerations when in his opinion the welfare of the country demanded it.

James H. Moyle—"I believe Cleveland will go into history as one of our great presidents. He failed to appreciate the west as has Roosevelt, and perhaps he almost ignored us. However, his opinions on big national subjects were sound, and have been endorsed by the trend of events, even in the policies of the Republican party.

$7.50 Hats for $3.00

Shapes—Half Price.

Before his second term I warmly admired him, and while the admiration has been less complete since, I believe a man who is gaining in power as a great national character, and will be remembered as one of the successful American presidents.

L. S. Hills—I have long been an admirer of the late ex-president, and particularly in regard to his action and stand taken during the silver furor, opposing the policy of Congress, which threatened to open the flood gates and let a stream of silver over the country. I doubt if there was another man in the country who could have done it. As a statesman, financier and patriot, Mr. Cleveland has made a lasting name for himself in the annals of this nation.

Chairman—Cleveland could have been a better party man by falling in with his beliefs, but he was a greater president by taking the view he did on the silver question, and time has justified his position, although it made him enemies in the west. I think his loyalty to principles as he understood them is him a big and growing place in history.

SECTION GANG MUTINY

Ed Riddle Attacked by Men at Garfield Rescued at Point Of Revolver.

Ed Riddle, a section boss in the employ of the Rio Grande Railroad company at Garfield Junction, between Bingham Junction and Bingham Canyon, was attacked by seven infuriated foreigners yesterday afternoon, who rushed upon him with iron bars and gravel picks, and had it not been for the assistance of car repairers near by, there is no telling what the consequences might have been.

It seems that Riddle had just been employed by the railroad company a few days before to take charge of this particular gang of section men, on account of the alleged fact that the former boss was unable to get the men to work. Riddle aroused the hatred of the men by compelling them to do a day's work every day, and they soon began making complaints that they were being worked too hard. They held private gatherings and were heard muttering unflattering language, accompanied by dark scowls directed at Riddle, for several days, and the revolt finally culminated yesterday when the foreman making wages, Sam, failed to pay them, and they refused to do work until Riddle discharged two of them on the spot. That was the signal for the uprising and seven of the swarthy-skinned sons of Hellas joined in the rush made on the objectionable foreman, one striking him with an iron bar, knocking him down. As quickly as possible, Riddle scrambled to his feet, and in time to escape being struck in the back with a pick which was being wielded by a husky Athenian, and with the whole howling bunch at his heels, he ran a short distance, and then, as the men were stopping, and one of them came out, and taking in the situation, at once drew a revolver, and fired a shot at the man who was attacking him. The man fell, and the rest of the bunch, seeing the attacking party desisted, and Riddle was safe.

He at once went to Bingham Junction, where he reported the complaint before Justice Joseph J. Williams against seven of the men, whose names are James Lamtucker, Gust Carson, making wages, Sam, failing to pay them, and the others. The men were placed under arrest but Alvares and Boras, and others are now out after these two. The original complaint against the men was an assault with intent to commit murder, but this was reduced in the county attorney's office to the lesser offense of assault, and in default of the amounts were taken to the county jail. It is thought the other two men will be under arrest before night, as they have wages coming and clothing which they cannot afford to leave.

SCHIED SAYS BYWATER.

Manager of Pacific Board of Underwriters on Selection of Fire Chief.

Manager Karl Schied of the Pacific board of underwriters was asked this morning what he thought of the action of the city council in removing Vall from the head of the fire department. Mr. Schied said the underwriters were not in politics, and he didn't propose to enter the political arena himself. However, his approval of the council's action would depend on who the next man was to be, and acknowledged he was not in a position to say positively, should W. G. Bywater be made chief of the department. Mr. Schied hoped there would be a much better choice than that made by an Ogden city council which picked a man who had never been a fire steamer in action, and appointed him to the head of the department. He said that if Bywater should an appointment of this kind be made in Salt Lake, Mr. Schied said he would regret the removal just accomplished here.

While Mr. Schied did not say so directly, he certainly inferred that fire insurance rates in the future would be contingent upon local public policies and the efficiency of fire department administration. That is to say, if the voting majority decide to keep the fire department in politics—run it as a purely political machine—the insurance companies will govern themselves accordingly, and property owners will pay the price.

LATE LOCALS.

Local Bank Clearings—Today's local bank clearings amounted to $763,248.87, as against $1,015,554.82 for the same day last year.

To Address Oregon Teachers—A. C. Nelson, superintendent of state schools, has gone to Oregon, where he will address a convention of the teachers of that state to be held at Eugene, June 25 and 26.

Arrested at Saltair—Another drunk and disorderly person has been arrested and will have his hearing before Justice of the Peace at Saltair. William Kay is the man arrested, and he disturbed the peace of Officers John Corliss and Joseph E. Burdick, who have been detailed to maintain the peace at the lake resort.

Levi J. Ritter Hero—Levi J. Ritter, son of Hon. W. W. Ritter, has returned from Cornell university, where he graduated this month with high honors, after four years of study, and with the degree of mechanical engineer. He is accompanied by a classmate, Charlton Blaine, a relative of the late J. G. Blaine, who will spend the summer vacation with Mr. Ritter, as his guest.

Beaver Bonds—The state board of loan commissioners held a meeting this morning at the office of Gov. Cutler, and decided to invest $20,144.40 of the funds set aside for the redemption of the territorial bond issue of 1892, in the purchase of 20 Beaver school district bonds of the denomination of $1,000 each. The bonds bear 5 percent interest, and mature May 1, 1928.

The semi-annual conference of the Relief societies of Liberty state will be held Wednesday morning and afternoon in the Ninth ward assembly hall, sessions being scheduled for 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

Thirty-five St. Louis tourists will reach this city in the morning, en route to the Yellowstone, spending the day in Salt Lake.

H. W. Prickett, general agent of the St. Joseph & Grand Island will open offices in 206 Judge building, July 1.

IN CRIMINAL COURT.

Judge Armstrong this morning sentenced Martin Hoben, convicted of a statutory offense with a girl under 16 years of age at Bingham Junction, to one year's imprisonment in the state prison. Upon request of defendant's attorneys, 60 days' time was granted in which the defense may file a bill of particulars, and the bond of defendant was continued pending this proceeding.

A. Andrus also charged with a statutory crime, entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to six months in the penitentiary.

The bond of Arthur Brown, under conviction for forgery, on motion of the district attorney, was reduced to $1,500, pending proceedings on appeal to the supreme court in the case.

CASE UNDER ADVISEMENT.

The case of Neal McMillan, who filed suit in the Third district court on a writ of certiorari to have the proceedings of Justice Durand reviewed in what he claims was an illegal judgment entered against him in the Murray court in favor of William Forsythe on March 11, 1907. McMillan claims that a pretended complaint was filed in Judge Durand's court by Forsythe for $200.00 against McMillan, to which defendant filed a demurrer, but alleges that Durand failed to endorse or take notice of it, and proceeded to enter judgment. Judge Lewis has taken the matter under advisement.

LOST A FORTUNE.

Sailors Used $120,000 Worth of Ambergis to Grease Masts.

San Francisco, June 24.—Greasing masts, sea boots and oil skins with ambergis valued at approximately $400 a pound, sailors on the British bark Antiope wasted about $120,000 worth of the stuff unwisely of its value. It was until yesterday that John Mathieson, master of the vessel, learned that he had let a fortune slip through his fingers. A small part of the "grease" had been saved and this was identified by an Oakland druggist as ambergis. The Antiope reported here from Newcastle, Australia, a few days ago.

On the way up in latitude 20 degrees south a large quantity of "grease" was seen floating on the surface of the ocean and a calm prevailing, the men managed to scoop up several bucketsful of the stuff. The "grease" was found excellent and it was used for slushing down the masts, the balance being used by the men on their oil skin and boots. The captain says much more of the material could have been collected, but thought the amount picked up by the men was enough.

TO ORGANIZE TYPEWRITERS.

New York, June 24.—For the second time within three years an attempt is being made to organize the stenographers and typewriters. The bookkeepers, stenographers and accountants union which has been formed has issued a circular to all bookkeepers, stenographers and typewriters in Greater New York, urging them to join the new body.

The circular says that the hoodlums and teamsters get $3 a day because they are organized, while the office workers, who require more skill and training, get on an average much lower wages.

JOE JEFFERSON'S SON DEAD.

New York, June 23.—Charles B. Jefferson, eldest son of the late Joseph Jefferson, died tonight in St. Luke's hospital from a complication of stomach troubles. He survived by a wife and four daughters.

During the active career of the late Joseph Jefferson, Charles Jefferson was his father's manager and personal representative.
